North America, a large and diverse market, contained nearly [REDACTED] consumers as of 2018.

- While the majority of those consumers – more than [REDACTED] – resided in the United States, the region also had a populous member in Mexico, which had close to [REDACTED] consumers in 2018.
- Canada was the third largest North American market with [REDACTED] residents. Another approximately [REDACTED] consumers were spread across various island nations in the Caribbean, including Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Cuba, Jamaica and the U.S. territory Puerto Rico.
- As by far the biggest market in the region, the United States predictably ranks as the top market in overall volume across all the beverage categories. It is not number-one in per capita consumption in all categories, however, and the region displays significant variety among countries in the performances of the 11 major beverage categories measured in this report – beer, bottled water, carbonated soft drinks (CSDs), coffee, distilled spirits, energy drinks, fruit beverages, milk, sports beverages, tea and wine.
- Together, those 11 categories saw volume in the region approach [REDACTED] hectoliters, or almost [REDACTED] gallons in 2018.
- The United States accounted for more than two-thirds of regional beverage volume with nearly [REDACTED] hectoliters ([REDACTED] gallons). Thus the largest individual North American market had a higher share of beverage volume ([REDACTED]%) than its share of the region's population ([REDACTED]%).
- Mexico's share of beverage volume in 2018 ([REDACTED]%) was not much different than its share of population ([REDACTED]%).
- Canada accounted for [REDACTED] % of the market's beverage volume. The small island countries accounted for the remaining [REDACTED] % in 2018.
- As recently as 2013, CSDs stood as the largest category by volume, but bottled water surpassed them the following year. By 2018, bottled water volume was more than [REDACTED] hectoliters, or [REDACTED] gallons, larger than CSD volume.
