Traditionally protein drinks mainly were the narrow province of gym rats who purchased them in powder form, but this changed dramatically over the past decade once the beverage world saw the explosive success awaiting the ready-to-drink version of powder-based Muscle Milk.

- This occurred after diets like Atkins, while discrediting carbohydrates, helped to make protein a buzzword in nutrition earlier in the 2000s. When giant Pepsi Bottling Group (PBG) forged a national distribution alliance with Muscle Milk over a decade ago, this was enough to legitimize the segment in the channel, and this was one alliance in which the bottling system does appear to have accorded a guest brand a reasonable amount of attention, even if it took a while before PepsiCo was ready to fully integrate the brand via acquisition.
- The category has also drawn attention because of the efforts of major yogurt makers to position some of their drinkable lines as protein-rich meal replacements, although most contain barely two or three grams of protein per serving. And of course, as noted above, milk producers and plantmilk players have joined the party.
- Not surprisingly the Pepsi alliance prompted a frenzy of activity as other entrants look to get their protein lines into the distributors who were dispossessed of their Muscle Milk. These included independent companies with roots in the supplement space, such as VPX (with Redline) and Labrada Lean Body, and the major pharmaceutical company Abbott Laboratories with EAS Myoplex. VPX has made some headway, but the others have generally faltered, unable to get their hands around an alien sector, mainstream retail, and the distributors used to reach it.
- Major food and beverage companies have been attracted to the segment for its robust shelf price and lack of overlap with their core items, but a pair stubbed their toes badly. Soft drink marketer DPS invested millions in 2007 in launching a RTD version of the powdered Accelerade brand to which it had obtained RTD rights, but found the effort ultimately undermined by positioning and production issues that caused it to pull the brand quickly.
- About a decade ago, Muscle Milk's distribution partner, PepsiCo restaged its Gatorade sports drink brand to include a protein "recovery" drink, but that effort too sputtered.
- Still, PepsiCo keeps trying. Lately it has restaged its Evolve natural entry to boost the fiber content from one gram to 10 grams, add vitamin B12 but take out some sodium and saturated fat, while maintaining the protein content at 20 grams. And in a move that turned heads, it announced a partnership with meat-alternatives player Beyond Meat to collaborate on snacks and beverages, with the latter due in a matter of months. It's hard to imagine that those won't be protein shakes of some description.
