

READY-TO-DRINK TEA, KOMBUCHA & MATE IN THE U.S. THROUGH 2027

2023 EDITION (To be published September 2023. Data through 2022. Market projections through 2027.) More than 250 pages, with extensive text analysis, graphs, charts and more than 90 tables.

This comprehensive ready-to-drink tea market report examines the U.S. tea market at a time when ongoing innovation added to market upheaval caused by the coronavirus pandemic make this a particularly important time to keep a close eye on the trends. This in-depth report focuses on RTD tea market trends (pre-packaged, bottled or canned tea). It provides statistics on regional markets as well as historical and current sales data for the leading companies and brands. Forecasts through 2027 are provided and impact of covid-19 is discussed.

Packaging, distribution, advertising expenditures and demographics are discussed in detail, with data to back up the insights provided. The industry research also covers kombucha, looks at refrigerated (RFG) RTD tea vs. shelf stable trends, tea types and flavors, the organic tea market and much more.

Specialty teas such as green tea, herbal tea and chai that have provided verve to the hot tea market, have also found their way into the RTD tea segment. These so-called superpremium teas emerged in part to fill a vacuum in the existing marketplace.

- Green tea has a more healthful image than black tea, a fact recognized by AriZona when it released its line of green teas, which are among the company's most successful products.
- As in other beverage segments where consolidation has taken place, new RTD tea entrants may need to find an unfulfilled niche in an attempt to differentiate themselves.
- Foremost among these, at least in the public eye, was Honest Tea, started in Bethesda, Maryland, by a financial services executive, Seth Goldman, and his business school professor Barry Nalebuff. Coca-Cola Company gained complete ownership of Honest Tea in February 2011, after previously taking a 40% stake in the company. However, in the past year, Coke has pulled the plug on Honest Tea. Goldman is trying to recreate his Honest Tea blueprint with Just Ice Tea.
- Japanese company Ito En has also targeted consumers looking for “better” products. Following the example of Honest Tea, which demonstrated that not all consumers are seeking teas that are drowned in sweetness, Ito En introduced a line of unsweetened green teas that found unexpected consumer acceptance.
- Superpremium teas appeal to consumers who might not otherwise purchase RTD tea, thus providing an increasingly significant, incremental volume increase to the segment. Even beyond their actual volume contribution, superpremium teas have improved the image of RTD tea and have helped push the larger players to make RTD products better in terms of ingredients and health bona fides.
- For example, Coca-Cola developed a premium brand styled Gold Peak, which has made inroads into the market by growing at a very brisk pace.
- Honest Tea's then-key rival in the organic realm, Austin-based Sweet Leaf Tea, struggled to find its footing under Nestlé Waters' ownership (in fact, Nestlé Waters no longer owns the brand), and PepsiCo was unable to harness the potential of Starbucks' Tazo marque (which has been sold by Starbucks to Unilever).
- Still, the superpremium RTD tea segment continued to draw interest. In 2017, Starbucks introduced a superpremium RTD tea line under the Teavana trademark — although not with long-time coffee partner, PepsiCo, but with Anheuser-Busch. The Teavana line enjoyed early success but was unexpectedly discontinued. Sweet Leaf attempted to regain its luster under new owner, Fireman Capital Partners, but Fireman Capital divested the brand to Purity Organic.
